

Union, Owners Condemn JFK's Pay Proposal

By NORMAN WALKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unions representing some 450,000 railroad workers are expected to condemn today as inadequate a $100-million wage increase proposed by a public board to President Kennedy as a fair settlement.

The cost compares with a total 1961 railroad net income of $382 million. The carriers, which advocated a wage cut, had said in advance any extra wage cost would require rate increases. The pay proposals would give the workers, now averaging $2.42 an hour, a boost of 10.2 cents.

The workers involved are called nonoperating employees. They service and maintain the trains and rail facilities, as contrasted with engineers and others who operate the moving trains. About two-thirds of all rail employees are nonoperating workers.

Kennedy carefully refrained from endorsing the board's report after receiving it at the White House Thursday. He said it represented a diligent effort to help solve the big pay dispute and that he was gratified to note the board maintained its proposals stayed within administration economic guidelines.

"It is now the plain duty of both parties," the President stated, "to negotiate a responsible and noninflammatory settlement in their own and in the public interest."

There was no immediate reaction from the unions but a statement was expected later today. Under the law, both sides have 30 days in which to bargain before a strike can be called. The 11 unions have already obtained authority from their members to order a walkout at the end of the 30-day period.

The emergency board, headed by labor arbitrator Saul Wallen of Boston, roundly criticized the rail industry and unions for poor bargaining records in past years.

The board's recommendations:

1. A four-cent hourly pay boost dating back to Feb. 1. On top of this would come an increase effective May 1 of 2 1/2 per cent, which averages out at about .2 cents in addition to the 4 cents, making the 10.2-cent total.

The unions had asked for a 25-cent hourly raise. The industry had called for a 20 per cent pay cut in many pay categories, and no pay change in the balance.

2. A moratorium against the unions seeking further wage increases for a year, until May 1, 1963.

3. A rule providing for advance notice of five working days before employees are dismissed due to force reductions. The unions had asked for six-month advance notice, but the board said this would amount to a job freeze for unnecessary employees.

4. Establishment of a labor-management study group, with representatives of the public participating, to evaluate pay differentials between jobs. The board said there is too little difference between skilled and unskilled worker pay rates resulting in loss of incentive morale.

5. Finally, creation of a labor-management committee, perhaps with public representatives helping, to work on repairing the labor relations status of the industry. This group would discuss problems affecting the rail industry or the employees or both, sufficiently in advance to anticipate solutions and forestall crisis.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—Some 500 Future Farmers of America from 80 schools gathered at the University of Arkansas here today to participate in state judging contests.

The farmers participating are winners of district contests. They were to judge general livestock and dairy cattle, poultry and poultry products, dairy products, meats, and crops. A demonstration in electrification and a farm mechanics skills contest was to be held.

The winners in the state contests will represent Arkansas in the national competition next fall at Kansas City, and Waterloo, Ia.

Derby Loses One, May Lose Choice

By ORLO ROBERTSON

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The 88th Kentucky Derby lost one of its choicest today and possibly could lose Sir Gaylord, the 8-5 choice.

Vernie Winchell's Donut King, a California-owned horse, was withdrawn by trainer Ron McAnally. Donut King showed up with an infection in his left hind foot Thursday about the time the names of 18 horses were being dropped into the entry box.

"We could take a chance with the derby," said McAnally, "but he had that infection last winter at Santa Anita and when it re-occurred this time, we thought it better to hold him back for the Preakness at Pimlico on May 19."

There was much conjecture on the condition of C. T. Chenery's Sir Gaylord. The derby favorite, unbeaten in four starts this year, came out of a workout this morning slightly lame. The lameness did not appear to lessen as the horse was walked around the barn.

Trainer Casey Hayes, usually willing to talk readily about his great horse, refused to say anything.

"I have nothing to say," said Hayes as he watched the horse's slow walk around the shed.

"I expect to have something to say when I talk to Mr. Chenery," the lameness was in the right front leg, the same leg in which Sir Gaylord suffered a slight injury that put him on the shelf after the Everglades Stakes at Hialeah Park in February.

Meantime, Cicada, the stable's ace filly, was kept eligible for the 1 1/4 mile $125,000-added race. Cicada was entered Thursday along with 17 other horses as insurance in the event something should happen to Sir Gaylord.

The running of the derby, at Churchill Downs, could well be decided on what takes place three-eighths of a mile from the starting point.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Sir Gaylord, outstanding choice to win Saturday's Kentucky Derby, pulled up lame after a workout today.

But trainer Casey Hayes declined to make any comment, pending a conference with owner C. T. Chenery.

The lameness was in the horse's right foreleg and definitely showed as he was walked around the barn.

Several observers noted that the derby favorite, unbeaten in four starts this year, took a lame step after he was given a short breeze.

The lameness appeared to get worse later.

Hayes, usually a jovial, willing conversationalist about his horse, said "I have nothing to say. I hope to see Mr. Chenery around 10 a.m."

Blevins FFA Team to State Meet

The Blevins FFA Chapter recently participated in the District FFA judging which was held at Southern State College in Magnolia. The chapter entered six competing teams which consisted of General Livestock, Meats, Poultry, Dairy, Dairy Products and Agronomy.

And of these six teams, General Livestock placed fourth which entitled them to go to the state judging which will be held today in Fayetteville.

Members of the livestock team are Joe Baldwin, Larry Harper, Johnny Taylor and Danny Woolfolk.

There was an average of 43 teams entered in these six events and of the 43 teams, the Blevins Chapter ranked 13.

Blevins FFA Gets a Bull

RECENTLY, BLEVINS FFA CHAPTER RECEIVED A polled herford bull from the Sears-Roebuck Foundation. The firm paid for the bull and after two years if it proves desirable, Johnny Taylor will have first choice to buy him for the purchase price. Johnny will care for the bull. If he doesn't buy him the animal will be sold to the public.

THE TWO-YEAR-OLD ANIMAL WAS PURCHASED FROM N. R. Golden at Magnet Cove. His dam is from a top ranking herd and his sire is worth $28,000. Breeding fee is $2.50 for residents of Blevins District and $5 elsewhere. The bull is at the Taylor farm.

Negro Group Will Go to Hyannis Port

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Next Tuesday was tentatively set Thursday as the target date by Little Rock segregationists for a northbound "Freedom Flight" of two Negro families.

Destination of the flight, said Amis Guthridge, president of the Capital Citizens Council, is Hyannis Port, Mass., the President's summer home.

In Boston Thursday night, the President's younger brother, Ted Kennedy, said, "I will, of course, do everything I can for these people."

Guthridge said he hopes the President will have one of his brothers meet the two, unidentified, Negro families at Boston, Mass., airport "and get a helicopter to fly these fine people to Hyannis Port."

The segregationist leader referred to the project as "an airlift" and said it was the first of many similar undertakings by the council.

He said about 15 Negro families had applied for free one-way trips to northern and western cities since the council announced Tuesday it was undertaking the project—similar to ones currently under way in New Orleans and Shreveport.

"The Capital Citizens Council before this thing started had no money whatsoever," Guthridge said, "and the Freedom Rides North will have to be financed by people interested in them."

He said the Hyannis Port trip for the two families would cost about $1,000 which the council has raised.

Regarding his request that the families be met by a Kennedy, Guthridge said, "I'm sure these fine Arkansas citizens will be thrilled that they have the same type of reception that the African people have when they come to the United States."

Peace Corps Probe Asked by Lawmaker

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Peace Corps official says the training program for overseas duty is not designed to turn out Tarzans or Janes—despite the charge of a 65-year-old widow that she was ousted for refusing to do pushups and run a mile before breakfast.

Janie Fletcher, of Panhandle, Tex., said the Peace Corps ran her ragged at its training camp in Arecibo, Puerto Rico, and finally dropped her from a group bound for duty in Brazil because she objected to the physical training program.

The Peace Corps denied Mrs. Fletcher was pressed to undertake physical training beyond her ability.

"Obviously a woman of her years would not be expected to perform like the younger people," Timothy J. Adams, acting chief of public information, said Thursday night.

Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver said Mrs. Fletcher's dismissal was not due to her inability to take part in physical conditioning.

"There were other reasons and these were discussed with her," he said. "One of them was that of all candidates for Brazil she had the lowest language facility."

Mrs. Fletcher told a different story and she told it in a letter to her senator, John G. Tower, R-Tex. She said she was dropped because "the staff at the camp disliked me because I objected to the training. There could have been no other reason."

Adams said the Fletcher matter "is closed as far as we're concerned." But Tower demanded an investigation before the Senate votes on the corps $63.75-million budget.

Mrs. Fletcher said younger Peace Corps volunteers at the Puerto Rico camp stayed up until the wee hours and did much drinking. She said she was "cursed and shoved beyond my strength" in a program that "would do justice to any army training."

Shriver said he couldn't imagine anyone in the training camp cursing the Texas schoolteacher. He said night discussion groups were allowed to drink beer, but there was no moral laxity.

He said Peace Corps selections are based on merit, not politics, race, religion or age. "We have said from the beginning that Peace Corps standards would be high," Shriver said. "They have to be and we don't intend to relax them because of political pressure."

Adams said Mrs. Fletcher was one of eight trainees dropped for various reasons from the Brazilian group.

"Every Peace Corps applicant is invited to training with the understanding that there will be no final selection for overseas assignment until it is over," he said.

He said three people over 60 successfully completed the training program in Puerto Rico without complaint and now are overseas.

Jap Trainmen Jailed - 80 Die in Wreck

By CONRAD FINK

TOKYO (AP)—An engineer and three other trainmen involved in the three-train wreck that killed 13 persons were arrested today on suspicion of criminal negligence.

More than 300 other persons were injured—100 seriously—in the chain reaction smashup.

The engineer, Norifumi Minakami, 38, was grief stricken before his arrest as he told newsmen he might have misread a railroad signal as giving the green go-ahead minutes before the crash.

"I don't know how I can apologize," Minakami said.

Announcing the arrests later, Shoichi Kimura, chief police investigator, declared: "We have determined that a green signal light was an impossibility."

Minakami's freight train jumped the tracks minutes after it passed a signal point on Tokyo's north side and sideswiped a commuter train.

Injured, stunned survivors poured out of the passenger train's windows and doors and huddled in the darkness on a nearby track. Then another commuter train roared into the wreckage, sliced through knots of survivors, jumped the tracks and plunged down an embankment into a row of houses.

It was Japan's second worst train disaster since World War II. No Americans or other Westerners were reported among the victims.

Minakami said he was sure he got the green go-ahead signal "but it might have been my misunderstanding because the accident took place—which could never have occurred if the light was green."

President Shinji Sogo of the Japan National Railway wept as he told newsmen the accident was caused by "the carelessness of our officials." One of his assistants said the freight train passed through a red light.

"It rained people," said one man who lived near the wreck. "Tadashi Miyano, who lived below the embankment, rushed outside when he heard the first crash."

"While I watched, I saw the second train come rushing into the scene," he said. "I saw a coach go tumbling down the embankment and smash right into my house. The roof flew off and the whole house crumpled like dust."

Identification of the dead was slow. Many of the mangled bodies were trapped in the twisted steel and splintered wood of the three trains or buried far from the tracks.

The railway said it would follow the Japanese custom of paying condolence money—$167 to relatives of those killed and up to $42 to the injured.

Japan's worst postwar train disaster occurred in February 1947, when 184 persons were killed and 497 injured in a derailment outside Tokyo. The worst train wreck on record, in the Alps in 1917, involved a French troop train and 600 or more persons were killed.

Wanted to Unseat Fulbright — Faubus

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus indicated Thursday a stab to unseat Sen. J. William Fulbright would have appealed to him more than seeking a fifth term as governor.

Faubus, who faces six opponents in this summer's Democratic primary, said he wasn't interested in going to Washington as was in running against the incumbent Fulbright.

He noted that such a clash undoubtedly would have drawn international attention.

But, he added, his supporters discouraged him.

Bids Received on Millwood Dam Project

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—An apparent low bid of $2,054,780 was submitted Thursday by D. J. McQuestion & Sons, Dearborn, Mich., for the Millwood Dam on Little River in southwestern Arkansas. Army engineers estimated the project at $3,287,023.

Action on Sex Speech Defended

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A speech delivered at the University of Arkansas by a New York marriage counselor who condoned premarital sex popped up again Thursday at Little Rock. Gov. Orval E. Faubus used it as an illustration of academic freedom.

Faubus, speaking to a Little Rock civic club, said that after the speech, demands poured into his office that any member of the school's staff or administration who was involved be fired immediately.

The governor said he thought it possible that if anyone had been fired over the incident, the university might have lost its accreditation with the North Central Association of Universities and Colleges.

"Think carefully before you demand something from your government," he said. "If you are willing to give up some of your freedom and know full well what you are doing, then well and good."

Faubus touched only briefly on his indecision about running for a fifth term, the number of opponents he has drawn for the Democratic primaries this summer and the general election this fall. Otherwise, his speech was purely non-political.

Don't demand too much, Faubus urged the overflow crowd, especially from the federal government. "It looks easy when you don't have to pay for it immediately," he said, "but you will have to pay for it."

U.S. Must Trade or Fade, JFK Advises Nation

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—President Kennedy told the nation today it stands now at a crossroads in foreign economic policy and the clearest choice is "to trade or fade."

Given a tumultuous but uneventful welcome to the Crescent City, Kennedy confidently predicted that the American people will want to move ahead and lead the free world into a genuine Atlantic Partnership of growing international trade.

He borrowed a bit from a famous line of Britain's Sir Winston Churchill and said that: "This administration was not elected to preside over the resignation of America from its manifest destiny."

Expanded foreign trade, the President said, will mean more rather than fewer jobs for Americans, as well as a strengthened national security and foreign policy. The tools for fashioning all these, he said, are in the trade expansion bill now pending in Congress.

Kennedy put the entire Louisiana congressional delegation aboard his jet transport and flew down from Washington to deliver a major address on behalf of this bill.

"I know of no occasion," Kennedy said, "where the topic and the location of a presidential address have so neatly fit together."

The location was a new $12 1/2-million wharf—termed the world's largest—in the country's third busiest port.

Kennedy spoke from a flower-decked platform inside the vast covered structure stretching along the Mississippi River waterfront.

The New Orleans visit included a stop at City Hall to receive a key to the city and speak to the city's school children before taking off for western Florida to spend the afternoon at Eglin Air Force Base watching a display of aerial might.

Thousands shrieked a welcome to the President along the 14-mile motorcade route into the city. They waved flags and homemade signs, and even some campaign banners left over from 1960.

This wasn't exactly a political trip, but the turnout and enthusiasm made it look as if Kennedy would have no trouble carrying New Orleans. It is a city of more than 600,000 and a sizeable part of the population turned out. Police Supt. Joseph Giarrusso estimated the crowd from the airport to the wharf at more than 100,000.

As Faubus puts it, "I knew Faubus was unpopular, but most people thought the second term tradition would carry him through in 1964."

One For My Dame By JACK WEBB

"The Story": Rick Jackson has told police officers that he sent the missing Carla DiMucci home in a cab the previous evening. The officers tell him that the cab driver was murdered.

CHAPTER 5
I lost hold for a moment, lost hold and let a little of it out. "I was in Camp 5," I said, "on the Yalu River. I was there for two years, three months, and 19 days. I have seen all the kinds of death there are. I am through with death and have signed off from it. Even when I die I will not admit it."

I think the thing that impressed Lieutenant Geiser the most was that as far as an alibi for the night before was concerned I could not produce a single witness who was human. It impressed Hagopian, too, but not in the same fashion.
A little after one o'clock they sent me back to the shop. I rated a uniformed chauffeur for the trip.

"When I got back in the shop Hilda Barrett said, 'Let me go upstairs, Mr. Jackson and fix you a warm lunch. You look like you could use a hot cup of tea and a bite to eat.'
"I'll fix something for myself," I promised. "You hold down the joint."
When I got up to my rooms I locked the door behind me. I did open the door to the refrigerator and look at the food, but it made my stomach turn. So I settled for a tray of ice cubes and carried it to the sink. Then I got a glass from one cupboard and a bottle of brandy from another. As I carried the full glass to my easy chair my hand was shaking.
Tina chattered something at me from her cage and I went over and opened the lock and let her out. She ran up my arm, across my shoulders, and hit the sofa in a flying leap. I decided to feed her and Holmes in case I should succeed in forgetting.
"Hello-o, hell-o, hell-o, old man," Holmes shouted, when I brought him his dish.
"Hello, hello, yourself," I said, and we understood each other with no complications.
There was a timid tap on the door and then a stronger one.
I thought it would be Hilda, so I hid the brandy bottle beside my chair before I went to open the door.
"Hello-o," said the blonde, separating the word exactly as Holmes had done, but not sounding like a hill mynah at all.

"Hello, hello, yourself," I said, because it was a line which I had just practiced. She might have had an inch over five feet, but the mold, in spite of its diminutiveness, had been perfectly cast, so you got the idea that here was a lot of woman.
"Jackson," she said, "you are Jackson, are you not?"
I took her in very slowly and she waited with a sort of patient expectancy, as though she had no doubt how I would grade her papers.
"Look," I told her, "last night another girl called on me. She stayed an hour and then she walked out that door and no one but a taxi driver has seen her since and he's dead. So why don't you go away? Go away now and save a great deal of trouble."
"But it's Carla I want to talk to you about."
"Yes, Carla," I admitted, "although we never were properly introduced."
Then she smiled sadly, pushed a slim forefinger into the middle of my chest, and announced, "Jackson, you've been drinking."
I took a backward step I hadn't intended.

She seated herself on the sofa with her soft gray skirt folding about her knees.
Wolf sat down between us and cocked his head in my direction. I didn't blame him for the question in his glance. Tina bounced off my shoulder, landed on the arm of the sofa, sat on her haunches, folded her hands exactly in the manner of the blonde, and began to chatter.
When the monkey paused for breath the girl said to her solemnly, "But of course I do my own nails, don't you?"
Tina gave her a couple of thousand words on the subject.
"The Jackson," I said, "you apparently know. There's a Rick that goes in front of it. Richard, the police said this morning."
"Yes, I know." Her eyes were an amazing electric blue. "And this is Tina, and this is Wolf, and this is Holmes over there in solitary, although he's really been quite a Robinson, Supt.

Faubus Facing

non active governor who had over two years as governor and 10 as a chancery judge.

Faubus' main opponent in 1956 was Jim Johnson who had four years as a state senator behind him. Johnson gave Faubus his best race, polling 83,856 votes. Since then the 66,499 votes for Joe Hardin in 1960 is the most cast for one opponent. Three other opponents were without political experience.

In 1958 Faubus faced Lee Ward, a chancery judge for three years, and Chris Finkbeiner, a political beginner. In that election, Faubus hit the peak of his popularity, polling a record 264,346 votes, almost 70 per cent of the total ballot.

Bennett had won easily in two statewide races for attorney general before he took on Faubus. Bennett finished third behind the governor and Hardin, who was making his first race. The other two candidates in the 1960 race also were political novices.

His vote percentage fell, however, from nearly 70 to about 57 per cent, and the experts predicted he would lose an additional 10 per cent if he sought a fifth term.

Has he lost 10 per cent—or even the critical 8 per cent which could force him into a runoff?

Faubus says no. A recent poll, he said, showed he had 52 per cent of the vote. He would not say how the remaining vote was split among other potential candidates and how much was undecided.

Faubus' supporters say he has never lost strength during a campaign. "He has always gained," said one man active in all four races. "He gains gradually from the day he starts campaigning."

Political observers generally agree that Faubus will lead the ticket in the July 31 primary. Other candidates are pinning their hopes on a runoff. Tradition has it that no governor can survive a runoff. The two involved in a runoff since the state adopted a dual primary system — McMath and Cherry—didn't survive.

But the variety of candidates in this year's field gives the Faubus camp encouragement that a runoff will not necessarily be catastrophic.

"Assume McMath made the runoff," said one Faubus supporter. "Could Dale Alford give McMath his segregationist votes? Could Melton put the silk stock-

Miss Sheila Foster

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Walker Foster announce the engagement of their daughter, Sheila, to Beryl Franklin Anthony Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Anthony of El Dorado.

Miss Foster attended Randolph Macon Woman's College and will be graduated from the U of A in June, receiving a Bachelor of Arts degree. She is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, Chi Omega sorority and Kappa on August 4.

Chamber of Commerce man? Or His staunchest supporters are predicting he will run stronger than 1960 but behind 1962.

"And if Alford made the runoff A lot depends on how well Melton catches on with voters, on whether Alford can extend his central, and southeast Arkansas strength into other areas and on how many votes McMath has been able to keep through 10 years of

State Ranks 6th

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — State Highway Director F. R. Oliver said Thursday the state will have used 96 per cent of its federal matching funds for highways by Saturday and will have $1,649,210 of the $4,770,000 left. In the next fiscal year, Oliver said, Arkansas will receive $52.8 million in federal matching funds. The state ranks sixth in use of matching funds, Oliver noted.

If Faubus wins, he will have completed a run of precedent making the state's top office.

He was the first man to win a fourth term. The first, as a off, where would he pick up any votes: Not from Melton or McMath certainly.

Is Young Love the Real Thing

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen: Would you clarify my thinking on young love? May be I'm just an old fogey but I think a girl of 15 is to immature to recognize the difference between puppy love and the real thing.

I'm the guardian of a sweet girl who will be 16 this month. Last year, I foolishly gave her permission to date a boy who is 18 and attends her high school. At Christmas, he presented her with a friendship ring, which I let her keep. Now, he wants to give her a hope chest for her birthday. Should I let her accept it?

"Frankly, all this disturbs me. I constantly urge her to date other boys but she refuses. She and her steady plan to marry when she is graduated two years hence. Before he came into her life she got only A's on her report card. Now, it is C's and D's.

Although a good girl and very beautiful, she's just not mature enough to be dating one boy. But this I know. They will never break up of their own accord. What, if anything, should I do? —Anxious Guardian.

Dear Helen: Some teen-agers are born wise, others remain adolescents till the end of their lives. Mighty few are far enough advanced emotionally to take on the responsibilities of marriage. Nine times out of 10, "young love" is only puppy love and should not be taken too seriously.

To permit a 15-year-old girl to go steady is to catapult her into an early marriage for which she is not prepared. In the case of your ward, those declining grades indicate an emotional upset. Insist she stop seeing this boy until her grades improve.

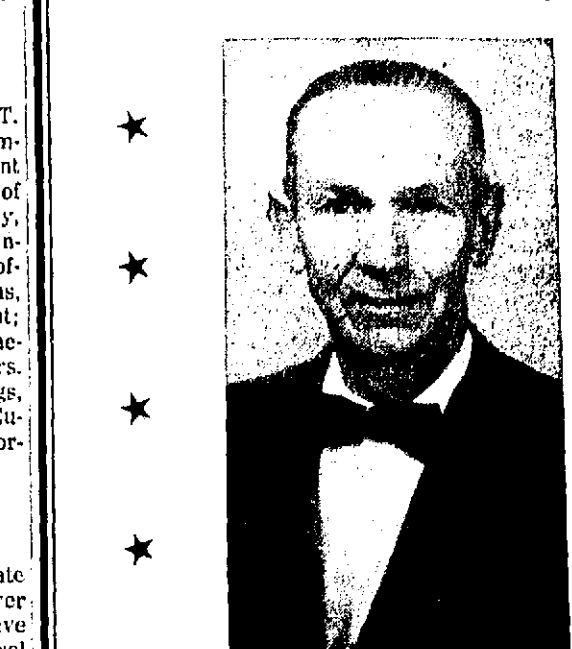

What do you know of his background? Has he character? Will he be able to support a wife in two years? If not, can his parents help? Would you? These are questions which both you and your ward should discuss. If an early marriage is her objective, how much does she know about home economics?

As her guardian, it is your responsibility to protect, educate and prepare her for life. Approval of the hope chest is a tacit acknowledgment of her betrothal to the boy. Is this in her best interests?

Dear Helen: I divorced because my husband ran off with another woman. But since I couldn't bear him children and she can—I didn't blame him too much. Now, I'm in love with a boy just my age—23 who, like me, is divorced. His wife was Japanese. They had one child whom he loves dearly. Because of him I moved from my home to be near the Army base where he is stationed. He comes to see me when possible and writes every other day but—'he doesn't name the day. All he says is, when and if he ever marries again, it will be me. I want more than anything else to become his wife and make him happy. Am I at a loss how to handle the situation. Any suggestions? —Puzzled.

Dear Puzzled: It's the old cry of how to have and hold your man. After all yours does write every other day. Don't force the situation. If your boy friend is worth-while, he is worth waiting for. But to let him know this would take the joy out of the chase. Be light, be gay and—puzzled.

Doctor May Face Murder Charge

HOOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Prosecutor David Whittington said Thursday night an information charging Dr. Whit Terrell with murder may be filed in Circuit Court here today.

Terrell, a Hot Springs dentist, is held under a Municipal Court charge of first degree murder in the Wednesday night slaying of Otis Howell, 56, a printer.

Police found the victim wounded at the Howell home, and he died several hours later in a hospital.

Whittington said Terrell admitted the shooting and quoted the dentist as saying he was visiting Howell and his wife, Alberta, 45, when Howell threatened to kill him.

Mrs. Howell was held on an open charge as a material witness.

Terrell told newsmen Thursday he had not intended to kill Howell. "He threatened me," Terrell said. "I thought I could shoot him in the shoulder and scare him. I didn't intend to kill him."

The dentist showed newsmen bruises on his arm allegedly inflicted by the victim.

Granted the St. Louis Cardinals were given a chance in the National League race this year. But who ever thought a longshot like Curt Simmons would be a big factor in keeping them in the picture?

Simmons, 32, Thursday night pitched the Cards to a 4-0 victory over Houston's Colts. He spaced seven hits for his fourth win in four starts—all complete games.

St. Louis managed just four hits against rookie Dave Gusti (0-3) and Dick Farrell, but they included Bill White's two-run homer, Curt Flood's solo homer and a run-scoring double by Ken Boyer.

By winning the Cards kept pace with San Francisco's Giants, who took their ninth in a row, 8-4 over Pittsburgh. The result left the Cardinals with a 1 1/2 game lead over the Cardinals.

In the NL's only other game,

Philadelphia nipped Milwaukee 9-8 on Clay Dalrymple's ninth inning single.

In the American League—Chicago stopped New York, ending the Yankees' seven-game winning streak 1-0. Kansas City knocked out Detroit 8-4. Minnesota beat Baltimore 8-4. And Boston handed Washington the 14th loss in its last 15 games, 7-4.

All other clubs in the majors were idle. Simmons, a star member of St. Louis' front-line pitching corps, has compiled impressive figures this year—25 hits and five walks in 38 innings, and an earned run average of 1.25.

Thursday night against Houston,

Simmons didn't allow more than one hit an inning. White gave him some breathing room with the home in the first, Flood connected in the third, and the Colts were dealt another tough setback.
